

Shrey Majmudar—originally from Austin, Texas—is a senior at Duke University studying public policy and computer science. Majmudar has dedicated his time at Duke to university service. He currently serves as Duke Student Government’s (DSG) Chief of Staff, helping oversee the day-to-day operations of DSG’s branches and affiliate bodies, consisting of over 100 peers; previously, he was elected by the student body to the role of DSG vice president of Academic Affairs.

Additionally, he serves on the Board of Trustees External Engagement Committee, President’s Advisory Committee on Investment Responsibility, Next Generation Living and Learning 2.0 Steering Committee, and many other university governance groups.

Majmudar’s professional experience includes working within Accenture’s federal consulting practice, the US Department of Justice’s National Security Division, and a Silicon Valley startup’s business development team. He aspires to run for Congress someday.
